

One of the teachers I met at a workshop told me she had adapted the loose tooth sequence story by taking photos of her students for each scene of the story. When our daughter Jenna was in grade one I tried out this cute idea by taking photos of her with her Dad (Kevin Moore).

Jenna's eyes sparkled!
her very first tooth was loose! Wiggling it, she wobbled the tooth back and forth. It wouldn't come out.

Just then Jenna's Dad
came downstairs. You've got a wiggly tooth, huh?
noticed Dad. He fastened
the string to her tooth and yanked! Snap! It
popped out of her mouth!
Ow! hollered Jenna. Now...

that hurt! Her eyes
exploded with happiness!
She dashed upstairs
and placed her tooth
underneath her pillow.
In the morning, her tooth
was gone and there was a toonie! The end.
